On their return trip from Pineville last Saturday the members of the Press Association took dinner by special invitation, at Crab Orchard Springs, Kentucky's noted summer resort. About seventy were present, and all were royally entertained. The hotel and cottages have been thoroughly overhauled, repapered and painted and the grounds are in beautiful condition.

PINEVILLE, KENTUCKY.

Something of the Little Mountain Town That is Destined to Become a City in the Early Future.

One of the enjoyable features of the Kentucky Press Association meeting last week was the excursion to Pineville, the county seat of Bell County. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company tendered the members a special train. Mr. John H. Millikin, district passenger agent of the company, was in charge. Mr. Millikin is one of the cleverest and most polite and obliging fellows the press gang ran across last week, and he left nothing undone to make the trip as pleasant as possible.

Pineville is almost due south of Maysville, and is some ten or fifteen miles from the Virginia and Tennessee line. It can now be reached in one day's ride from this city by taking the early train on the Kentucky Central to Lexington, thence the Cincinnati Southern to Junction City, thence the Knoxville branch of the Louisville and Nashville to Corbin. From this point the Cumberland Valley branch of the Louisville and Nashville will land one at Pineville between 6 and 7 o'clock in the evening.

The special train with the newspaper crowd on board left Danville last Thursday afternoon about 2 o'clock, and arrived at its destination some four or five hours later.

Much has been heard of this little mountain town in the past year or two, but if one goes there at present expecting to find much of a city he is doomed to be disappointed. There is undoubtedly a bright future, however, in store for Pineville. Its situation is one of the most picturesque imaginable. Pine mountain at this point seems to have been rent in twain by some giant force in the ages gone by, and through the narrow, rocky defile the Cumberland river finds a passage in a northerly course and then across the valley and to the hill beyond where it takes another sudden turn and flows almost due west. Pineville is at the base of the mountain, with the river on the east and north and the plateau on the west. "Mount Occident" towers up to an altitude of about 1,200 feet immediately at the south. The side of the mountain is almost sheer up, and the view from the summit of "Mount Occident" is pronounced one of the grandest to be seen.

The "old town" is situated in the narrow defile of the mountain gorge mentioned before, and on either side of the dirt road that winds along the river. The buildings in this part are all frame, and the most of them are one-story structures. The only public buildings are the court house and the school house. An examination of teachers was in progress at the school house Friday, and the room was crowded. Most of the applicants were young men.

The "new town" is located in the valley heretofore mentioned. A number of handsome frame buildings of modern architecture have been completed, among them being those occupied by the Pineville Bank, the People's Bank and the Pine Mountain Iron and Coal Company. Other buildings are going up, most of them business houses. The finest building in the place at present is the Pineville Hotel, built at a cost of $25,000. It is a three-story frame structure, of handsome design, elegantly furnished throughout, and provided with water, gas and all modern conveniences. The hotel would do credit to any city in the State. During their stay in Pineville the members of the Press Association were guests at this hotel and fared in sumptuous style. The proprietors left nothing undone that would tend to add to the comfort and pleasure of their visitors.

The contract has been let for the erection of a new court house, and work will probably be commenced this week. The building will be put up on the public square in the center of the new town. It is to be a three-story building, of attractive design, and when it is completed Bell County can boast of one of the handsomest court houses in the State.

The valley has been platted and laid off into streets, alleys and town lots, and the price these lots command shows that the owners have their eyes on the coming boom.

A fine iron bridge has just been completed across the Cumberland river, at a cost of several thousand dollars, by the King Bridge Company, of Cleveland, O. The main span of the bridge is about 250 feet in length.

Other improvements are being made. There is one saw mill in the town, and one saw and planing mill a mile and a half above the town on the river. Another mill is being erected at the point where Clear creek empties into the river, one mile above the town.

All that section is rich with timber, iron and coal. In the immediate vicinity of Pineville are fine veins of cannel coal, and up Straight creek a short distance is a vein of iron ore "twenty feet six inches thick at the point where the first opening was made." In addition there is fine building stone in inexhaustible quantities.

Railroads have been the one thing needed to develop this rich mineral and timber wealth, and the Cumberland Valley branch of the L. and N. is the first to reach the field. This road passes through Pineville and is to be extended on to Cumberland Gap, a distance of fourteen miles further south. The grading is already completed a mile south of the town, and Mason, Rosser & Rinehart were given the contract for the rest of the work last week. The members of this firm were at Pineville last Saturday preparing to place a big force of hands along the route. The same firm is engaged in building the tunnel at Cumberland Gap to let the road pass through to Virginia, where connection will be made with other roads for the sea coast.

Pineville's growth promises to be phenomenal during the next decade. The rich coal and iron deposits and the vast timber area of that section are bound to attract capital. Indeed they are already drawing men of wealth to that section, and the development of these vast resources is certain to follow in the course of a few years. One railroad is there now, and others will follow, and the railroad is the one thing that has been needed.

As has been heretofore stated there is undoubtedly a bright future in store for Pineville.

The Democratic Ticket.
In the persons of Grover Cleveland and Allan G. Thurman, the Democracy of the country have a ticket that is worthy of the warm support of the people. Their public career has shown them to be the friends of the masses. Their record is before the country to be read by all, and it is a record any one might well be proud of.

The San Francisco Examiner of a recent date pays a handsome tribute to Cleveland. "He is no longer an untried man," says the Examiner. "For more than three years he has guided the national policy, skillfully and safely. He has been equal to every demand. Assuming control of a government whose machinery was operated by a hundred thousand hostile subordinates, he managed it, all inexperienced as he was, with the easy mastery of a veteran. Never once did he fail to rise to the needs of his place. The men who had expected to control him found him a leader. There was no power behind the throne.

Cleveland was President, and the Administration was his own. Before last December Mr. Cleveland had proved himself a good President; at that time he proved himself a great one. By one splendid stroke of courage and statesmanship he lifted his party out of its bog of timid irresolution, drove the tariff-fattened monopolies from the insolent aggressive to the alarmed defensive, awakened the people to the infamies they had been patiently enduring for a quarter of a century, and marked the lines of the coming campaign beyond the power of shifty politicians to change."

As for Allan G. Thurman, his very name is the synonym of honesty and integrity. His public career has endeared him to the people, and the people know full well that with too such men as these at the head of the Government the country will be in safe and conservative hands.

No Democrat has cause to lag behind in fighting for such a ticket as his party has presented.

MISS CURRIE DUKE, Kentucky's fair violinist, has gone to Europe to complete her musical education.

ALL is not lovely and serene in the Republican camp. Some of the leaders engaged in a bitter wrangle in Congress a few days ago over the tariff plank adopted by their party at Chicago, Congressman Cannon arguing that it means one thing and old "grand-pap" Kelley insisting that it means just the reverse. And yet we are told there is no "straddle" in their platform.

ED PORTER THOMPSON, who was a candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction before the Democratic convention in 1887, has joined the list of Kentucky editors and will hereafter have charge of the Owenton Democrat, his son having purchased the paper. Mr. Thompson is a talented writer, and will be warmly welcomed by the fraternity throughout the State. At the same time Brother Ford, who retires from the Democrat, carries the best wishes of his contemporaries with him to his new field of business.

EX-CONGRESSMAN WINANS, of Wisconsin, is in the city. Speaking of the political situation Mr. Winans said: "Wisconsin, in my opinion, will give her electoral vote to Cleveland, Thurman and Tariff Reform. We will not only make big gains in the country districts, but in manufacturing quarters as well. The time has gone by when the workingmen can be fooled with the cry that a reduction in the present tariff means lower wages. Mr. Smith, the present Labor Congressman from Milwaukee, is already out for Cleveland and Thurman, and he says that thousands of independent workingmen in the city and other cities of Wisconsin will also support the ticket."

The above is a Washington City special to an exchange. The sentiment in the Northwest for the Democratic ticket is undoubtedly much stronger than it was four years ago, and is steadily growing. Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa may be classed as doubtful States this campaign.

THE DEMOCRACY of the Tenth Kentucky district will hold a convention at Winchester August 23d to nominate a candidate for Congress. B. F. Day of Montgomery County, and D. D. Sublett, of Floyd, are avowed candidates for the nomination, and J. D. Black, of Knox County, C. R. Brooks, of Mt. Sterling, Thos. G. Stuart, of Winchester, and others are mentioned for the position. Hon. W. P. Taulbee, the present member, it is understood, will not be a candidate for renomination. This district, which contains twenty-one counties, is the largest in the State, extending from the Bluegrass region to the Virginia and Tennessee line. Politically, it is quite close, although the Democrats have usually a small majority. It is said, however, that the Republicans will have no candidate if the Democrats should nominate Hon. J. D. Black.
